TO MISS B. B.

Most assuredly, dear Betty,
Went thou wise as thou art witty,
And as good as thou art pretty,
I'd have all your sympathies;
For poor Davis then have pity,
When the wild strains of this city
Come a singing through the city
Like acclion symphonies.
I've shied bricks at my rival
Tantalus, the cursed devil,
Who has dared to wine and snivel,
Over thy divinity;
Ha, yer whelp—yer I squirm and shrivel,
Else yer'd be more meek and civil,
Ere I boot yer to the devil,
Where yer'd get "affinity!"
There he goes—my darling honey,
All he cares for is your money,
While I ask for but the sunny
Smiles of my own Betty dear.
And he'll know that the drumming
Up of conceits is a coming,
And he's looking out for something,
From the draft to get him clear.
Ha, but when'er o'er Pacific soil,
The ananoda spreads his coil,
To turn to naught the tempting spoil,
As 'twere an after apple;
Till then ting Tantalus to him,
If he don't walk more straight and trim,
The sport to see of monsters grim,
A writhing in death's grapple.
For true as steel
To the common weal,
Old Brown remains
In spite of chains—
And Tantalus—oh, you know,
Who said to mortal long ago,
"The whale and shark all down below,
By quick instinct can surely know,
When storms will rip
The mighty ship
And food bestow
To make them grow!"
And who 'twas said into a maid,
Beneath Elysian balm shade,
To where the "lovers" often stray,
"Oh, gentle maid, dost thou not know,
That I four future fate can show?"
Beneath the wave
To feed the boar,
Constrictor! Oh,
How I dread
That dragon red,
Which is to sup
Our blood all day,
And gulp us down
From toe to crown,
Ere we can know
To whence we go!"

CLIMATE OF REESE RIVER.—A correspondent of the Bulletin, writing from Austin, under date of Jan. 2d, says:

"We are now in mid-winter, in the full enjoyment of fine days, bright suns, and a beautiful, balmy atmosphere. Snow has not fallen six inches deep, it has it rained three days at a time. None of our water courses have been frozen over, and the disciples of Izaak Walton betray the luxurious trout upon the treacherous bait at any time in our mountain streams and in our principal river. It is surprising to the inhabitants of these mountain heights that there is no inclemency of weather. They came here fortified against it, and they are agreeably disappointed at its continued absence. In truth, our climate has been misrepresented in the prophecies of the ignorant. It is not rigorous, and there is no reason for it to be. Our position geographically in the Great Basin is 2,000 feet lower than Virginia, and we are effectively sheltered by successive ranges of high mountains in every direction, which intercept the full sweep of bleak winds. The sun shines as long, and its rays are as genial as in the same latitude in California, and therefore the climate is not any more severe. To a resident of Southern California, or even of San Francisco, some of our days would seem a little coolish; but the immigrant from Northern Maine, Iowa, or any other like latitudes, is delighted at the mildness of this climate, and its agreeable contrast with that of his former home.

"PRETENDED FRIENDSHIP"

I've seen some elves who called themselves My friends in summer weather, Blown far away, tomorrow's day, As winds would blow a feather. I never grieved to see them go, (The rascals, who would lead 'em?) For what's the use of having friends, If false when most you need 'em? Then what's the use, what's the use of grieving? "A jolt" for those in whom there's no believing! I've seen men rich in worldly gear, Eternally repining, Their hearts a prey to every fear, With gladness never shining, I would not change my lightsome heart For all their gold and sorrow, For that's a thing that all their wealth Can neither buy nor borrow, Then what's the use, what's the use of grieving? "A jolt" for those in whom there's no believing! And still as sorrows come to me, (As sorrows sometimes will come,) I find the way to make them flee, Is bidding them right welcome, They cannot brook a cheerful look, They're used to sobs and sighing; And he that meets them with a smile Is sure to send them flying, Then what's the use, what's the use of grieving? "A jolt" for those in whom there's no believing!

MARRYING UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

The editor of a Southern paper is responsible for perpetrating the following: "Not long since a Confederate soldier returned from the wars to his home, near the State line dividing Kentucky and Tennessee.—The first business he attempted to was that of marrying the girl he had left behind him when he first started out to seek the bubble reputation at the cannon's mouth. A large party was gotten up by the bride's family, and a man who was conceded to be Justice of the Peace, because he had held the office for twenty years before this cruel war commenced, performed the ceremony that united two loving hearts that had but a single thought. After these rights had been observed, there was a feast of hog and hominy, roast turkeys, pumpkin pies, etc., and several gallons of forty-rod whiskey to be discussed. In the course of human events the newly wedded pair were put to bed according to the custom still in vogue among the rural population.

They had scarcely begun to realize the "situation" before there was a great rattling at their chamber door, and an imperative demand for them to rise. Some prying people had just discovered that the magistrate was not a regularly elected officer, and was not a Justice at all. Alarm took them all, and another Justice was sent for who lived some miles distant. Before midnight the knot was tied again, and the joyous pair suffered to retire for the second time. The first contretemps was discussed freely by those who had not gone home, and the various contingencies of the matter investigated thoroughly. All at once it was found out that the last Justice lived in Kentucky, and the ceremony had been performed just over the line in Tennessee. There was a hurried rush up stairs, and another arousing of the bride and groom. They came down stairs somewhat dissatisfied with the turn matters had taken, and then the whole party went down the road three-quarters of a mile, till they got into the State where the 'Squire lived, and there the wedding rites were performed for the third time. The bride's mother, not satisfied with all this comedy of errors, had, sometime before, dispatched a swift messenger for a stated preacher, and when they got back to the paternal mansion, to make all things safe, the knot was tied for the fourth time by the man of God. By this time the first glimpse of daylight was striking the eastern sky.

Wearied out by the experiences and anxieties of the night, they were at last suffered to retire in peace. Half an hour had not elapsed before there was another confusion in the house. A thundering knock at the chamber door of the young couple, made the groom thoroughly mad. He told whoever it was that it was "too late," and swore he would not get up again for all the mistakes in the world. He would whip the first man that disturbed him again, he didn't care who it was. A gruff demand to open the door, if he did not wish to have it beaten down, and the rattle of a musket decided him to submit once more to the imposition.

On opening the portal he was confronted by a Federal soldier, and the words, "You are my prisoner—come along with me." Vainly did he plead to have the privilege of giving bail for his appearance, and his offers of bribes were as useless as the idle wind. The officer charged with his arrest was inexorable, and now the chap is spending his share of the honeymoon at Columbus, in the guard-house, while the disconsolate maid, his bride, weeps for him at home.

THE LION FIGHT—A GERMAN PARABLE.

The royal spouse of a powerful ruler of the East came to him one day, weeping with indignation, to seek revenge against a delinquent and offender of her majesty. "Behold," said she, "the criminal brought me an ornament of precious stones, but the jewel proved to be false. He is already atoning for his deceit in a gloomy cell, but he shall pay for his wickedness with his life, I swear it by myself. I demand, O king, that you condemn him to a contest with a lion!" "O, let us not judge in passion," replied the monarch. "For how can indignation decree justice? It becomes a prince of the nation to be free from anger. Is he not the representative and vice-regent of the Highest?" "Does not God express his anger in the tempest?" inquired the queen. "No," replied the king; "He displays His benevolence even in the tempest. Ah, my beloved, man is too apt to form his ideas of the Eternal from himself."

But the queen's anger increased, and she said: "God also hates and punishes the delinquent, and He has not given the sword to kings without a purpose. I only ask that justice be done the criminal. His death has been announced to him. There is no alternative." "Well," said to the king, "be it so!—tomorrow!"

When on the following day the hour arrived, and the drums proclaimed the bloody spectacle, the queen arose with a splendid train and rejoined in her heart at the triumph of her indignation. For revenge is like a cooling cordial to the burning mind.

to me more beautiful than the royal purple that adorns you, is my only reward. For your countenance assures me that I have acted like the representative and vice-regent of the Highest."

Then the drums announced the termination of the spectacle, and the people all cried, "All hail, our king and queen!"

Go-BETWEENS.—There is perhaps not a more odious character in the world than that of a go-between—by which I mean the creature who carries to the ear of one neighbor every injurious observation that happens to drop from the mouth of another. Such a person is the slanderer's herald, and is altogether more odious than the slanderer himself. By his vile officiousness he makes that poison effective which else would be inert; for three-fourths of the slanders in the world would never injure their object, except by the malice of go-betweens, who under the mask of double friendship, act the part of double traitors.

A gentleman who had been victimized by a notorious borrower, who always forgot to pay, called him one of the promising men of his acquaintance.

S. H. SEYMOUR, Proprietor.

THE UNDERSIGNED, LONG CONNECTED with the establishment as Book keeper, begs leave respectfully to inform the old patrons of the house, and the public generally, that he has leased from Mr. Bailey Sargent,

THIS MAGNIFICENT ESTABLISHMENT, which will in future be entirely under his management and control, and where he will be pleased to see his old friends and the traveling public. He flatters himself that his experience in the business, and his long acquaintance with the people of California, will be a guarantee that no one will leave his house dissatisfied, and he pledges himself to spare no pains or expense in providing every means for the comfort and satisfaction of his guests.

THE AMERICAN EXCHANGE is well known to the people of California, that it seems almost unnecessary to say anything in praise, either of the building or its location. The Proprietor will only remark that it is inferior to no house in the State in all the requirements of a FIRST CLASS HOTEL, being in a central location and easy of access from all parts of the city. The ROOMS are large and WELL VENTILATED, and furnished with Spring Mattresses. Water has been introduced into all parts of the house.

BATH ROOMS on the premises for the convenience of families.

Two Coaches are attached to the Hotel to convey passengers to and from the steamers.
